Reach Out

Of all the clubs at West, FRIENDS of FOREIGN STUDENTS must reign supreme. No other club has such a great tradition of quality and quantity of membership; and what other club can boast of an advisor like Mr. Barnes, with his sense of humor and generosity? It is probably debatable whether the FFS achieves its appointed purpose of helping poor, lonely foreign students at West, but it is undeniable that at least these few expatriates did experience some of the unusual sides of American life that are not usually found in school.

The first and last year I spent in West High School made a deep impression on me. Despite the vast differences from my experience of school in Hong Kong, I enjoyed my study here very much. The principals, teachers, officers, and classmates were very kind and friendly. I enjoyed participating in the activities of our foreign students club because there I got to know many friends from other countries. I will not forget my happy life in this school and I would like to give all my best wishes to our West High School.

Senior Rosanna Chow,

I have enjoyed being here and regret to have to go back to the Netherlands. I have appreciated the hospitality, kindness, and helpfulness of the Americans. West High was the right place to come to, with its abundance of interesting activities and courses, and from my classes I have learned many useful things.

For a student from Israel, faced with language problems and adjustment to a new school system, it takes some time before being able to review the situation intelligently. Among the things I found different were that the emphasis was placed on critical thinking rather than factual knowledge. It was a great relief to be able to select subjects of interest to me.

Another thing was that for years I saw the same faces for six or seven hours a day. The fact that here one moves from one class to another gives the opportunity to meet more people. I can now say, without a doubt that West was a worthwhile experience. I believe that I am more equipped to develop a liking for all different school systems.

Varda Deligdisch, Israel

As a foreigner in this country I was automatically placed in the enviable position of being naturally objective and justifiably prejudiced all at once. I noted with surprise, satisfaction, and respect some of the faults of this nation. Surprise, for instance, on remarking the relative absence of the short-haired-bermuda'd-t-shirted-all-American-type-boy, the image of which has predominated the American image abroad for some years past. Satisfaction, particularly, on perceiving the many illusions this country tends to cherish, one of the more noticeable being the widespread lie that people here speak English. Some people even had the affrontery to claim that I spoke "British"-English! And respect for the many things this country can be proud of — its youth, its efficiency and disdain for red tape, its wealth. My greatest problem in three-years sojourn has been getting people to understand my name. From "Loge" to "Lunch" I got them all. However, I found that claiming to be Tim "Large" achieved the necessary result.

Senior Tim Lodge, England

They don't look like your typical slave — no chains, brand, or depressed looks. But the West High WOMEN'S GROUP wonders, "Are we getting a slave mentality?" While anxious males turn paranoid wondering where the hatchet will strike next, the women students and some teachers, are looking outward with a new view. "Why can't we get equal pay for equal work — learn a skill without being told to tend to our knitting, be executives in our own right?" The scheming is about liberation, so that just being a woman won't require that the mind be neatly boxed into "homemaking" while males of peacock pride strut the rest of the world unchallenged.

A thorough familiarity with Mr. Braunschweig's hot-wheels track was the only pre-re-quisite for membership in SCIENCE CLUB; from there the club proceded to bigger and better toys. The telescopes at the Pine Bluff Observatory first attracted attention, though thanks to the weatherman, they could not be put to use. Fieldtrips to various institutions, including the Chicago Museum of Science and Industry and possibly the Milwaukee zoo were also on the agenda. In accordance with the members' interests, guest speakers were invited to talk on subjects connected with the natural sciences. We only asked that the speakers stick to their subject (although a few did stray from the facts.)

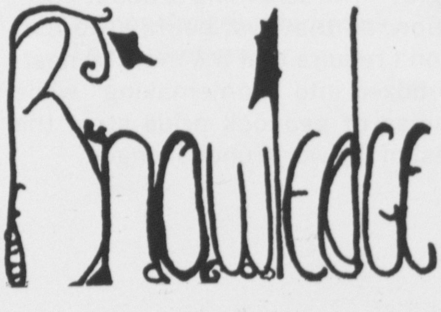

Each year there is a group of students selected to become members of the NATIONAL HONOR SOCIETY. They are chose on the basis of scholarship, service to the school and other good deeds (Kurtz, how did you get in there?) NATIONAL HONOR SOCIETY is a national organization, as you might have guessed. It was set up to offset all the awards and recognition given to athletes. (Smith, how did you get in there?) Society members are expected to live up to the standards by which they were chosen. Members of the NHS are some of West's top students (How did any of you get in there?)

Honor

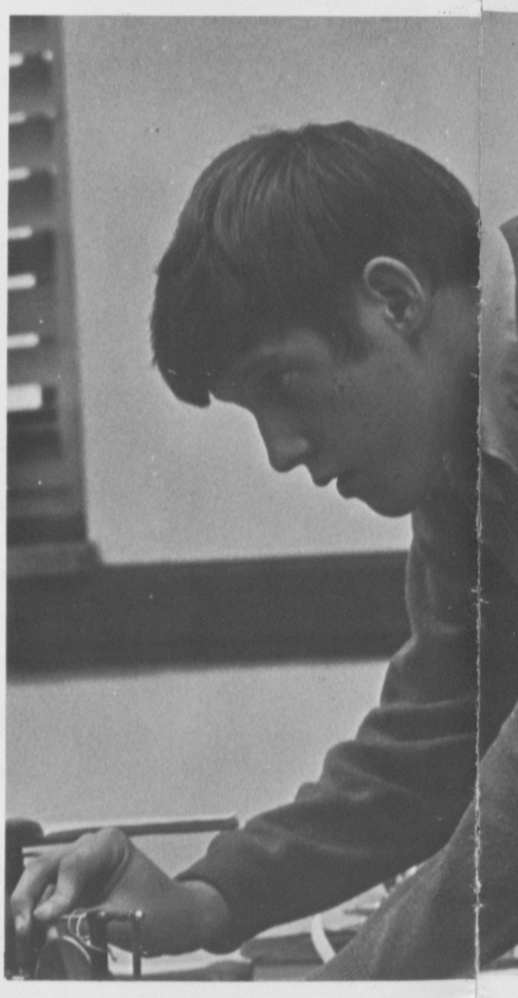

See the NATIONAL MERIT SEMIFINALISTS. They are very smart. They beat the national cut off on the test. The test was given in February, 1970. They are very smart indeed. Smile and congratulate each other, National Merit 1/2-finalists. Now you may win some scholarship money; smile and hope National Merit Semifinalists. Fat chance.

For the past three years, West has been blessed with an undefeated phenomenon called "Math Team." This great tradition of finishing first was carried through with the aid of such distinguished coaches as D. G. "Mac" McCloskey and Barney "Vince" Yaeger. Many area schools have participated in these meets, but West's team spirit, sense of tradition, and guesswork have always pulled us through. A team consists of ten students from various classes, who enter in diverse events. The individual scores are totalled for the team but those students who obtain the most points in their respective class get a thrilling prize. The joys of victory can not be achieved without facing all the emotional trama such as fear. P.S. Fear is when mathletes are on the bus with 10 minutes to departure time. This indication shows the esteem in which a team position is held. Math Team does lend a little "atmosphere of chase" and enough excitement to meet (ha ha) any capacity.

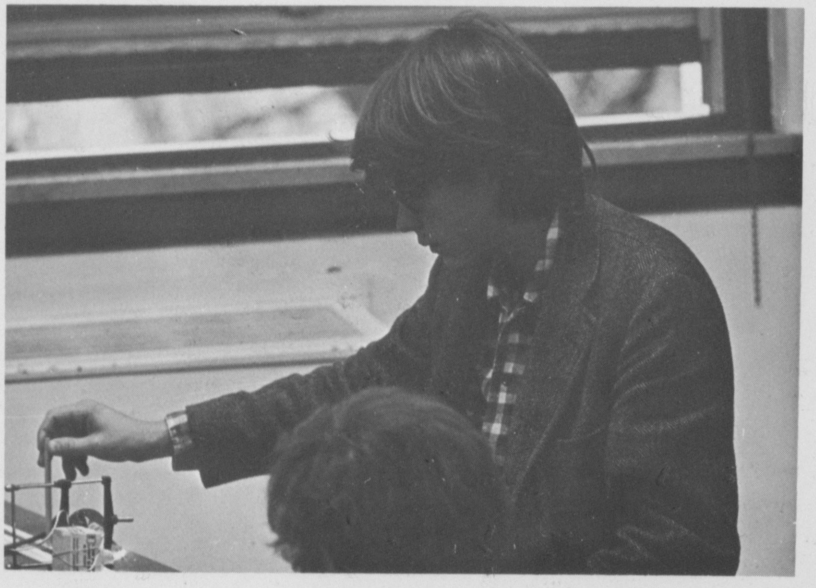

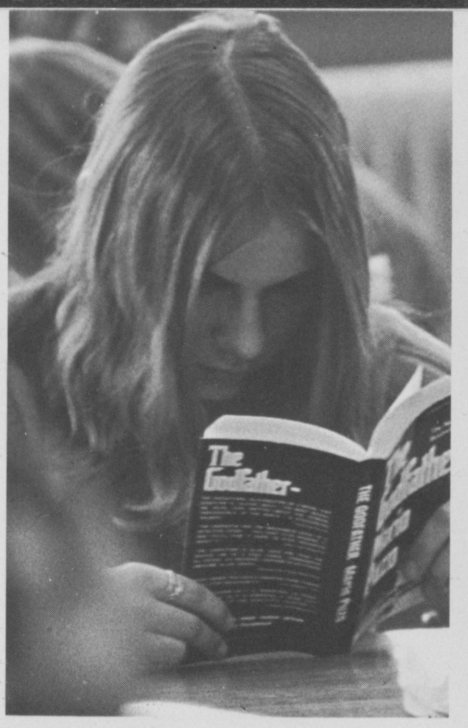

Today is tuesday january 1970 oops 1971 i took my chemistry exam today and i got an a i am really happy because of it i studied a great deal yesterday and it payed off in about 20 minutes i have an english exam i don't really know how i'll do i haven't studied

Junior Class Float

A small contention arose this year about the advisability of having a junior class float. (Notice I say small contention, as most of the class was apathetic). Some kids wanted a regular float as in previous years, but others wanted to donate the money for the float to a charity of some kind. However, it was finally decided to build a float.

Then there was the problem of an idea. Each idea brought up was either used in years before, or by the sophomores this year. Some juniors wanted a topic relevant to the world today. In the end, the float was Bewitch Beloit. Unfortunately, it didn't win.

BEWITCH BELOIT

Homecoming's theme for 1970 was Flames of Autumn. The turnout for this dance was much less than expected. The court consisted of Queen Tammy England and princesses Vicki Sutton, Ann Straw, Janet Cook and Julie Zwettler. Their escorts were Andy Kraushaar, Brent Smith, Dave Kurtz, Bob Johnson and Tim True, respectively. The band that played was Moses Godfrey. The decorations were fall oriented with corn stalks and pumpkins. The coveted coal bucket was again won by the class of '71 with a theme of "Defeet Beloit". The only highlight of the weekend was the victory over Beloit.

Midwinter's theme was Snowball. The court consisted of Queen Katie Hershleder and princesses Kathie Law, Barb Ritchie, Kathy Butler and Judy Hoven. Their escorts were Bill Breitenbach, John Kingston, Eric Grimm, Forrest Lipke and Bruce Bohanan, respectively. The decorations were winter oriented with snowflakes and snowmen. The band that played was Merrill Springs.

For most, the routine of school is overwhelming, and there becomes a need to escape from its realms. To help satisfy this need as a social creature, the large empty space called "Charlie Brown's" was founded. Yet in order for this "seed" to sprout and grow, a community must exist, one which can satisfy the needs of that seed and be responsive to the needs which it in turn created. C.B.'s is a place which thrives on imagination and is aborted by stagnation and conformity. It goes through stages of interim and stages of renaissance because all is dependent upon that community which C.B.'s serves.

I. Triana En Fete II. La Procession

The work portrays a colorful religious festival held annually in Triana, a section of seville. The Procession of Roses makes its noisy way into the festive Triana. The most prominent families of this city are taking part in the parade, driving resplendent carriages fittingly bedecked. The procession is in honor of the Virgin Mary whose banner is carried on an ox-drawn silver float and rides high above the crowd. Down the street comes the colorful, provocative Andalusian dancers. The dance is interrupted by the procession, which is announced by flute and drum. The religious theme, repeated frequently, climaxes by soaring triumphantly to mix with the sounds of the Royal March and the clang of cathedral bells. The dances and songs begin again, but soon their sounds die away completely, and peace and quiet return to Triana.

An impression for Band

I have walked across it late at night when it was shrouded in fog, and during the brilliant sunshine hours of midday. I have driven over it countless times and passed under it on boats. There are few days in the year when I do not see an almost human personality, astonishingly varied, assuming different moods.

"This yearbook speaks of conflict. Logically all conflicts are founded on an uneasiness about something in one's self. I speak now of the strangeness one feels when first entering a class at the beginning of the period.

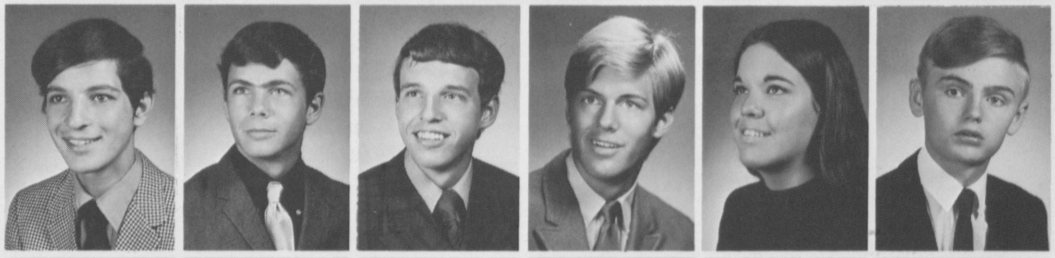

You haven't really communicated with anyone yet that day and you want to start a conversation, to feel like you're "in" the class while fumbling through papers and books trying hard to think of some way to "break the ice;" but all your approaches seem ridiculous. To have someone else start would be ideal, but they're either talking to others, sleeping with their eyes open, or fumbling through books also.

I've lived in Madison all my life so I know quite a few people. This is partly due to a somewhat brassy and forward approach developed after too many years of fumbling through notebooks. But consider people who have moved here from out-of-town, out of the U.S., or those who feel out of it that day. Be an extrovert once in a while. You're bound to meet some amazing people on the other side of the room by the end of the year!"

"This year at West was unique, in the fact that this was the last of two classes that had received some students from Central University High School upon its closing in 1969. Among the kids having to make this transition from Central to West were varied thoughts and concerns as to how they would be treated and accepted. A great many looked upon this transition as an infringement and an abrupt end to their small secure niche where all knew all.

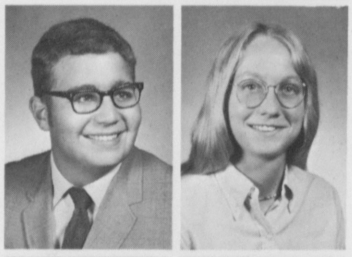

Most of the girls, and a few of the boys making the "big switch" didn't take the advantages of joining clubs, participating in sports, or other such activities in order to get acquainted with West. They came with a negative attitude; they wouldn't adjust. Those who became involved with West, especially the boys, through sports, found West to be a traditionally great and rewarding school, not only athletically, but academically."

"My search has been for something outside of the academic influence and something which will continue in future years to carry an influential meaning. I think I have found this something in the diverse kinds of people which make up my school community. From teacher to student to coach these people have provided their own different periods of concern and apathy, of direction and misdirection, of understanding and misunderstanding. Fortunately some have left me with a sincere personal attachment. If only because the true nature of living calls me to react to these situations, I have found that these challenging involvements here at West have provided me with a healthy insight."

"Most people believe that going to a small school offers more advantages than going to a larger one, but I disagree. In a large school such as West there is a great variety of people where it is difficult to find a stereotyped student anywhere. As I leave West I'll probably forget about my classes, certain activities, and student rights, but I'll remember the individualism of people."

"I am really sick of teachers and their reasonable demands, commonly called "projects for your unscheduled time." Obviously the teachers were told by their "boss" to assign papers to keep the kiddies out of the commons. However, if all a pupil's teachers follow this command right down to the letter, it can mean ulcers developing in eighteen hundred stomachs as the students cannot use their unscheduled time (maybe a total of three mods) to do ten hours of work!"

"Considering the size of the school, the teachers at West High make a tremendous effort to get to know their students. For the most part, faculty members are extremely friendly and try their best to be helpful in dealing with personal matters as well as academic ones. I'm sure that every student meets at least one teacher he can become friends with and talk to during the time he is at West.

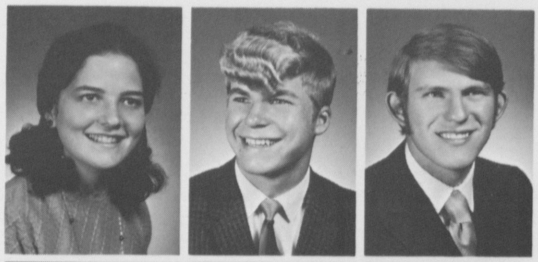

"We often forget or just don't stop to realize that teachers at one time or another probably had the same problems we are experiencing now. They found solutions and are usually willing to share their ideas with anyone who sincerely wants to listen. The faculty at West deserves credit as one of the best in Madison."

"It's amazing to see that so many students at West lack respect for the school's property. This condition has become increasingly evident within the last two years. The commons area seems to exemplify the ever increasing need for this to be corrected. With the completion of the commons, it was hoped that the atmosphere created would be more pleasant, relaxed and condusive for people to gather and talk to one another. It is unfortunate that this hardly seems to be the case. The commons repulses many people, and rightly so; the chairs have obscenities written on them, a variety of graffiti and on some the cushions are torn, or perhaps cut. The tables are scratched, the floor has deep black scratches with occasional stains scattered throughout the area. Very often one might see that day's "hot lunch" rather nicely spilled on the floor, garnished by a variety of litter. By 3:20, a person walking through there becomes disgusted at the sight of it.

"If West's activities do not interest its pupils, then West is failing an important part of its job. Something is wrong when dozens of announcements are read daily and the response is nil. Either the vast majority of West students are entirely apathetic, or the activities have not been updated to create interest. I don't think apathetic students are the problem. West needs a "drug-rap" center, a sex discussion group for interested students, and a group set up to discuss current news or politics — these would be just a start. If West now has up-to-date scheduling, when is it going to start on its activities?"
